The former Aero airplane factory in Prague-Hloubetin¹ has been producing a new type of aircraft since August 1954. This is a four-motored plane intended to carry 42 passengers. The plane is completely constructed of a light metal and has four Walter engines. The factory produces three such planes per month. These will be used by the Czechoslovak Airlines. The factory also has orders for these planes from Poland, Hungary, Rumania, the USSR, and China.
